NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE - SHREVEPORT, LA

Follow: @NWSShreveport

South winds and increasing cloud cover will persist today ahead of an approaching cold front, pushing high temperatures into the upper 70s to lower 80s. The cold front will advance farther southeast into the region tonight with strong to severe storms possible, mainly south of I-30.

Hazardous Weather

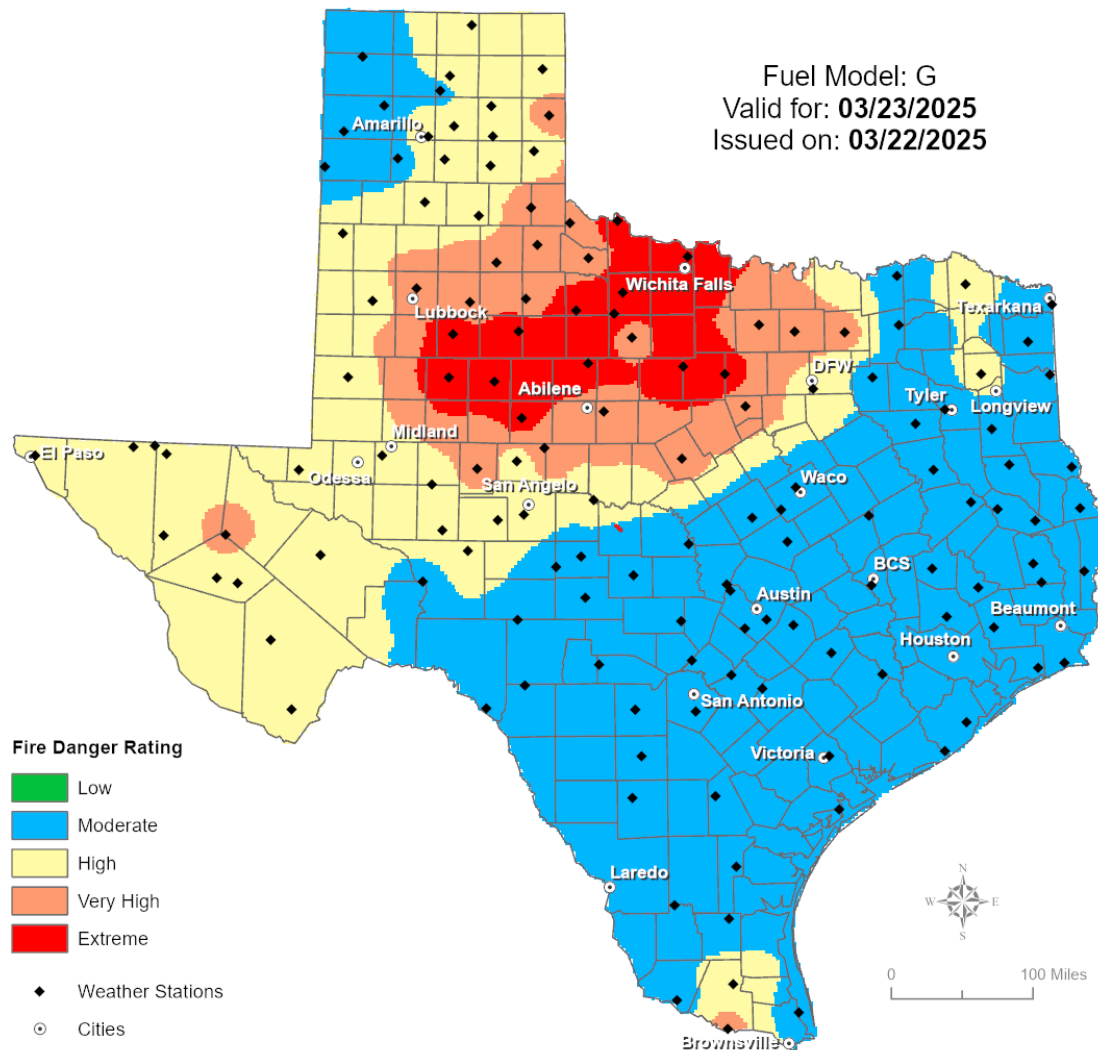

The warming trend continues today with highs in the 80s for most areas and 90s beginning to return to our southwest. Morning clouds and localized spots of patchy morning fog should break by the afternoon. Winds will be breezy again in the afternoon and evening followed by a chance for showers and thunderstorms by late evening over the eastern portions of the region.
